BOSCH
Invented for life

Product Manager for Automotive Industry

Bosch is one of the world's leading suppliers of technology and services in the areas of automotive and industrial technology, consumer goods, and building technology. It is a major manufacturer of products such as heat pumps, and its subsidiary Bosch Rexroth is the world's largest independent supplier of wind-turbine gearboxes. Since 2008, Bosch has invested more than one billion euro in photovoltaic. It also developed hybrid and electric power train technologies for motor vehicles long before its competitors. Bosch employs some 283,000 associates in more than 150 countries worldwide. Together, they create innovative technology that is "Invented for life" – technology that benefits mankind and provides solutions to environmental problems. Nearly 50 percent of the company's eight billion euro research and development budget thus focuses on protecting the environment and conserving resources. Bosch employs 33,000 research and development associates worldwide. It also registers more than 3,800 patents each year. The development and manufacturing expertise of Bosch associates is evident in many high-end products. For example, the company is the world number one for micro-mechanical sensors. These components stabilize cars when they start skidding (ESP) and are used in tilt-sensitive screens for mobile data devices.
